Any words of wisdom?

Listen to your elders, they have you're your best interests at heart and they can only help you. They have been through the struggles and confusion you are going through and understand more than you realize. Don't be afraid to achieve your dreams but don't let the success go to your head or failure to your heart. If you haven't found your passion yet, don't worry you will find it through your life experiences. Grown ups still don't know what they want to do when they "Grow Up." Live in this moment while always keeping your priorities in line. It's easier to put in your hard work than make up for your mistakes. Relish the moments of your youth. Be mindful of how your decisions affect your future and others. Always keep an open mind. Embrace change.
